

The way things are going,

I find myself
leaning
more and more toward the simplest

possible
shapes:
spheres,
cylinders,
cubes.

Minimalist
austerity = always good.

But hey, maximalist chaos looks way more new.

To combine the two, best practices demand greater transparency.

Starting at Square One, I visualize a box

in high-gloss
fire-engine
red.

Preferably on a ← pink ground.

It sits up on legs,

like a Noguchi
lantern.

Imagine that you are peering into a secret dream-world.

Enclosed, private, phantasmagorical.

Each side opens to a mysterious view: you look past curling crabapple branches to glimpse hidden surprises within...
